Permanent Link to Norway, Finland suspect Russia of jamming GPS
2021/06/10

Photo: NATO/Espen Hofoss, Forsvarets forskningsinstitutt NATO conducted its largest military exercise since the Cold War in the frigid waters and icy mountains of Norway Oct. 25-Nov. 7. During the final days of the Trident Juncture exercise, GPS signals guiding ships, aircraft, tanks, trucks and troops began to fail. Tracking screens flickered and positions were suddenly wrong from a few meters to hundreds of kilometers. Civilian airliners, cars, trucks, cargo ships and smartphones operating in and around Norway and Finland experienced similar disruptions. Norway-based airline Wideroe told The Barents Observer that its pilots were reporting the loss of GPS signals when flying to airports in northern Norway and Finland. Airfields affected ranged from Kirkenes, on Norway's border with Russia, to Lyngen in Troms, much further west. Russia is the chief suspect of jamming the signals in reaction to the massive size and proximity of the military exercises. Russia also has recently conducted massive military exercises in the Baltics. "It is possible that Russia has been the disrupting party in this," Finland's Prime Minister Juha Sipila told local media. "Russia is known to possess such capabilities." Trident Juncture involved all 29 NATO alliance members. Neutral Sweden and Finland also took part amid growing uncertainty over Russia's ambitions in the tense region. Extensive GPS signal disruption in northern Finland during NATO exercise #TridentJuncture2018 <https://t.co/uLYbezKkAK> If your offensive military capabilities rely on GPS, guess what the adversary will try to do? — Hans Kristensen (@nukestrat) November 9, 2018
